While it doesn't look great on the cd version, the vinyl artwork for OK Computer looks fantastic. Must be due to the larger size.

Mellon Collie is one of my favourites, as is Pinkerton by Weezer.

I'll have a look through my collection later and pick out any other gudduns.

They are overrated.. but they're not bad. I still prefer them over these new "punk" bands nowadays.

YES!!! exactly! i don't think they suck (not too bad anyways l.o.l jk) but they definately don't deserve the #1 spot on every "VH1 Greatest Songs of All Time"-type thing, and kurt doesn't deserve to be in the top 5 of every "100 Greatest Guitarists EVAR!11!11!!!" articles in guitar world. I'm not saying they're bad, but no matter how much you wanna like them, they still don't deserve all the worship they get. Sorta like Stairway to Heaven (Zep had tons of better songs!)

Well said. I'm not defending those 100 greatest... lists, but I'm just saying that although they are overrated, they should not be barraded since there are many bands nowadays that suck eons more than they do.

Re: Great Album Covers

Posted by cherry - 2006/10/21 23:22

You can't call Nirvana over-rated just because you don't find their style appealing. To huge Nirvana fans like me, Kurt's lyrics and the band's music has a unique feel to it. It's angsty, but not too angsty. Its punky, but not too punky. Its poppy but not too poppy. And most of all, just by listening to a couple songs, the music makes me feel in touch with the band on this weird, personal wave length. Don't get me wrong, I'm a huge Pumpkins fan, but I think that that's where the Pumpkins and Nirvana aren't equal at; that personal connection. Not to me anyway. Everyone has lived a different life and experienced different things. Nirvana's music just connects with me more based on the life I've lived.

Re: Great Album Covers

Posted by Alienbob - 2006/10/22 13:29

no, most people do find their style very appealing. But Kurt turned into an effing martyr of sorts for grunge and rock and roll in general after he killed himself. I mean, after he died, everybody was like "ZOMG greatest band of all time." They were good, but certainly did not deserve the title of best band ever (which i believe to be very subjective). So most people like the band and what they did, but there's no need for the excess amount of hype that follows the Nirvana name.

Re: Great Album Covers

Posted by cherry - 2006/10/22 15:33

I can see how people would want to distance themselves from Nirvana, due to all of the other people who attach themselves to the "legend" of Kurt Cobain and only own Nevermind. But to deprive them of the respect they deserve as artists based solely on that case is very demining to te band's image as artists. I can see what you mean Aleinbob, but I don't think you're giving them enough credit. Anyway...We got a bit off topic didn't we?

yeah, i bought their ep and album before i heard all these comparisons... it's weird, i just randomly heard their song "well thought out twinkles" one day, and thought, wow! hehe... i think i just loved the fuzzy guitars, cos you don't hear that a lot lately... and his voice is kinda cool too, anyways... i found another one of their songs ,(liked it too), and thought i'd buy the album, so i found both carnavas and the pikul ep on amazon and pre-ordered ages ago... then i started seeing all these reviews and stuff when it was getting closer to the release date... nearly all of them said they sound like earlier pumpkins stuff! i didn't see it, but i can sorta see why now... obviously the albums are no way as good as the pumpkins imo either, but i still really like them... compared to most guitar bands nowadays, i definitely think they rate high above a lot of them if not all!

i know it's off topic to rehash this area, but i feel the need to. i understand that you're a big SP fan, otherwise you wouldn't be here in the first place. and, in your defense, you did state that this was just your opinion. but nonetheless, you've clearly defined that to you, this is a difference between SP and ye old anavrin. but surely you must realize that this difference only exists for you, and x number of like-minded people, while at the same time, just as many people would say the opposite. i think a person MUST identify and connect with a band in order to be a fan. if you didn't connect in some way, even if it's instrumental music, you couldn't get into it.

personally, i felt that connection with nirvana a long time ago, but sort of lost it when i found the pumpkins. kurt suddenly seemed like a stranger to me once i heard billy singing about things that perfectly related how i felt.

i guess what i'm saying, and perhaps i'm wrong, is that it's unfair for you to call that a difference between the two bands. it may be a difference for you, but that doesn't make it a solid truth. and as an aside, i guess at some point i realized i couldn't relate to a guy who'd abandon his child forever. i'm honestly not opposed to suicide, except in a situation like that where you have a child. your child should ALWAYS be seen as more important than yourself.

ps-sorry this was so long. :(

i've never wanted to flame more than i do right now.

i propose a new rule: never, EVER bring up Nirvana on a forum. It's like the third thing you should never talk about next to politics and religion.

I love nirvana. They are one of my favorite bands. I'm sure there are some of you that feel the same way and some that feel differently. No matter how you feel, please don't start bashing the band. Nothing good can come of that. It seems to me that arguing about nirvana can cause much conflict, so please, just shy away from it.

Posted by joene - 2007/01/10 13:35

This may be a lame topic, but i'm curious what everyone's favorite album cover is!
the image/picture on the album cover is very important, it even affects our opinion on an album sometimes (although it shouldn't)...

i think the greatest album cover of all time is that one from NEVERMIND. and it has nothing to do with the status of the album itself (i don't even have the album, i'm not really a nirvana fan). but that picture of the baby with the dollar bill, is just extremely powerful and symbolical...

Re: Great Album Covers

Posted by Believe - 2007/01/11 04:09

I agree - That image has always stood out to me as well. If it wasn't an album cover it would still make for great art.
