I saw Ratatouille a couple days ago and I loved it. I was thinking that it's my favorite cartoon/animated Disney movie. Then I made a top 5 list.

- 1.Ratatouille
- 2.Sword and the Stone
- 3.Sleeping Beauty
- 4.Alice In Wonderland
- 5.Peter Pan

What's yours?

I liked Aladdin when it came out, I think it's because I always get to this day, "Hey you look like Princess Jasmine"
I don't know if that's a good thing or a bad thing.

Wow, no one has mentioned some of my favorites...

These are not in any particular order:

1. Bambi
2. The Fox and the Hound
3. Aladdin
4. Beauty and the Beast
5. Peter Pan

Well Jasmine, I think, is the most beautiful Disney character ever... so take it as a compliment. :)

jasmine is so gorgeous! be happy!

anyway, these are loosely put in order

1 sleeping beauty

2 cinderella

3 snow white

4 the emperor's new groove (i'm not sure if this is disney but i think it's hilarious)

5 aristocats!!

They were all complimenting Jasmine, not you! :mad

J/k :D

Anyway. I have a Story to tell. :cowboy

The first time I ever listend to SP's cover of "Sad Peter Pan" I immediatly fell in love with it...And it wasn't until after the 5th listen or so that I realized I've never actually seen the story unfold on screen...

I had only read the picture book as a child... :darcy

The funny thing is, the following day after having this revelation I saw a video copy of "Peter Pan" lying in the "kid's corner" of the Doctor's Waiting Room Area...It was like Destiny! And so ---

Needless to say I swiped the damn tape and watched it later that day!

:down

And it's not like I felt bad about it either. I have no sympathy for the poor tots because none of them have the patience to sit through an entire film anyway...Much less in a Waiting room where the t.v is 10 feet above their head and the seats are uncomfortable >,>

4. 101 Dalmations
5. Rescuers Down Under

What is Watcher in the Woods?

Anyway, my 5:

- 1)Beauty and the Beast (the animation is MARVELOUS, really. I miss 2d like whoa.)
  - 2)The Incredibles
  - 3)The Little Mermaid
  - 4)Toy Story
  - 5)Sleeping Beauty

OK off the top of my head, so in no particular order.

Pete's Dragon

Alice in Wonderland ( I remember when I took a trip with my family to see my grandmother we used to stop at Stuckie's(?) and my parents would let my brother and I pick out one..and maybe two things if we were good on the trip..I picked up the ultimate Alice in Wonderland sticker book on one of those trips..niice!)

Mary Poppins

Lady and the Tramp

The Many Adventures Of Winnie The Pooh

Runners up:

Fantasia (Even though the Mickey, broomstick and water portion scared the poo put of me, I have a cell from the movie)

The Fox And The Hound Aroooooo!

Bedknobs And Broomsticks

James And The Giant Peach

And all the classics!

...ya, I like Disney a bit.

Nice return of the living thread.

I don't know of many Disney movies off the top of my head, but there was this awesome live-action film called "Bed Knobs and Broomsticks", made in the 70's and set in the 30's/40's during WWII, very reminiscent of "Mary Poppins" but in my opinion, a lot better, and not nearly as cheesy.

Also very funny!

I just texted (or SMSed) my friend who is a Disney movie pioneer, I said "Top five Disney movies, GO!"

She replied,
Beauty and the Beast;
Lion King;
Sword in the Stone;
Hercules

It's not five, but whatever. add my movie to the list, and theres your top five disney movies.

i loved bedknobs and broomsticks, that is def one of my faves.

i also like monsters inc, both toy stories, and the incredibles.

Haha! It's a good thread, why must it be put in the corner? Right?

First off I have to correct the portion from the Alice in Wonderland portion to brother and me. Gaaa! I was worried the grammar police would come and take me away on that one.

Bedknobs and Broomsticks total fave. Though I have to say that part of the charm of Marry Poppins is the cheese, in Sword in the Stone was good. But that was back when they actually did all the animation by hand.

Ahhh! I forgot about the Sword and the Stone!

I have to say I have the upmost respect for the people that created animation by hand! Computer animation is an art...but hand animation is an A-R-T hands down. I mean there was no quick erase, if you made a mistake you had to recreate the whole cell or all the cells after the error...by hand none the less. Le sigh!

this is an awesome idea!
okay,

i think this is my top 5, not in any order:

- Beauty and the Beast
- Toy Story I
- Bedknobs and Broomsticks
- Alice in Wonderland
- The Fox and the Hound
- Lion King

Okay 6, but i couldn't decide. :billy ok, i have to add alice to my list too. it is a great one.

and i think that HA is right, drawing by hand is way harder than coupter animation. that is a total art form.
