So yeah, SP is playing Live Earth. That's cool and all..but is anyone here interested in the idea behind the whole Live Earth concept?

Hell yes! The idea that I find awkward is actual concern for the Earth itself... The collective Earth itself will be fine, and live on. It is us, human beings, that will suffer what we find to be so tragic. Of course there are many other beings apart from humans that will suffer specifically, i.e. polar bears, whales, other endangered and soon to be endangered animals. However, it is mainly our problem, and the risks that global warming brings to modern human civilization and society.

It's not just about the humans. Anyway, it's a dumb thing to say because whether or not we're worth saving, people want to survive.

Saving the Earth? Lord, we can't even save this board from some of the immature, random posts that seem to be becoming ever so prevalent. (Not referring to your topic at all Rivers. . . just the boards in general).

Awww, I thought this was going to be a topic on the show Heroes. (Yes, I'm a dork who thought the original poster meant "Save the Cheerleader, save the world.")

I would be keen on helping keep earth sustainable. The energy-efficient lightbulb seems a good place to start. But seeing that I live in Southern California and it's been a balmy 100+ degrees lately, I'm not yet eager to "conserve" energy by forgoing my air conditioner.

And if it means Al Gore giving it another go at the presidency, then by all means! :)

Dougy, easy on the nihilism, buddy. I know our planet's going through a drought here but there's no need to be a little black raincloud.

I have an idea - If u dont like the leadership or the way other humans operate...make yourself into a model human being that people can follow. Even if it means you have to die to be different. This is how the world gets heroes like Jesus and

Martin Luther King. The world has always been corrupt - but there are people who come along and say "Hey, things don't have to be this way" - but those are the bravest of humans - humans who are not afraid to stand up to the whole world if the whole world is wrong. Humans who are not scared to die for what is right. When we have some more people like that, people who act without fear - then and only then will you see change. The evil people on this earth aren't afraid to take what they want by force - good people have to learn to be the same way. A human being must be a protector of earth and of the rights of other human beings. This may require being a warrior and a martyr as well. Most good people just want to live their life with as few problems as possible and this is why the evil people rule this planet. Our society works like this: Evil people do what they want, good people complain and take no action.

Save the world for aesthetes everywhere! and for generations of non believers to come. this is all we get. i say we make the most of it and look after the setting of one of the most underrated states of being that this species will ever underrate....this place gave us life, not a man in the sky. if we put as much emphasis on that as we do religion, we wouldn't have water restrictions, animals disappearing into thin air, oil peaking in most countries, or a war in Iraq.

Re: Save the World

Here's why the sunlight sucks:

When its the afternoon, and you're driving and you're wearing sunglasses and you have the stupid sunshade down but it's still in your face which makes it really hard to see a stupid kid who decided to jump in the middle of the street who probably deserved to get run over because, one, he was wearing a fall out boy shirt, and two, because he threw his skateboard in the street. All because the sun was in your eye!

Can you tell I had a good day today!? :upset

if it wasnt for the sun we wouldnt exist hahahaha or we'd have to make a movie like Danny Boyle's "Sunshine!"

But if it means getting to ogle Cillian Murphy for two hours, BY ALL MEANS. That movie looks awesome.
