Some people just aren't into posting on message boards. I "lurked" on blamo and netphoria for years before becoming an active member. Once I started posting, it became quite addictive.

Netphoria has cleaned up a lot recently. No more constant thread derailments, plus the wealth of SP knowledge that's there is unreal. It definitely deserves some respect.

Bah, I tried Netphoria, and was put off immediately. For starters, there was the onslaught of ads.

I tried making a thread in the off topic section to introduce myself, but I couldn't, because I had to post five replies on another thread first.

Stupid, or what?

Those posts ended up getting deleted, sending my post count back to zero, and subsequently deleting the thread that I made.

GRR!

:upset :upset :upset

:notapprove of Netphoria.

Haha go thepumpkins.net! Netphoria is so annoying that i haven't and won't go there for a long time :D

There may be a wealth of info but who wants to put up with their crap?

Be cool and join thepumpkins.net and as DON says its more chilled and friendly ... join the family lol :)

So you guys figure that by putting down netphoria, you're going to encourage a bunch of netphoria fans to register here?

It's interesting, there are lots of guests, but there are also lots of users that never seem to show up.

I'm from Los Angeles.

There's a great mix of global participation here, methinks. :)

Yes :D

Down here everything is upside down, and the sky is green and the grass is blue. :down

That is a tad harsh.

I like most netphorians, (except for the one that deleted my posts) but not netphoria itself.

What does it have that thepumpkins.net doesn't?

yeah i know how you feel... i also consider this to be an official site.....

never even tried to post anything on netphoria i used to go there for guitar tabs because they were easy to save but then i found thepumpkins.net and never went back ....

plus they dont update as often
