Yes and the unbearable Shitgeist in the middle...

Hang on: Wasn't MACHINA II supposed to be for free...Now they want $200 for it. But, honestly, I'm also interested in the released MACHINA II...

No... AFAIK they usually don't have CDs or records in these framed things.

These are probably just pictures of the album covers.

OK, what's the point of this memorial thingies?

$200 for prints of the album covers behind glass, $300 for prints of the album covers behind glass WITH an autograph of Billy and Jimmy (or so)...

I mean, we're the fans, but who needs that???:confused

I made my own framed discography a few years back using poster flats I got from various record stores and from ebay. I think mine looks better. I don't like that Zeitgeist is in the middle and larger than the other albums. Plus it's way over priced.

I'm not sure if they have fixed the problem or not, but the first run of these "discographies" had a major error. The release date for MCIS was labeled as 1991 with the same date as Gish. I'm sure they have fixed it now though.

Pics of misprint. Apparently the signed discography is/was limited to 50, individually numbered.

I'm a huge Pumpkin Head, and this just looks like a cheap waste of money to me.

I agree. I collect Pumpkin stuff, but I don't think this item is worth the money. It looks cheap.

Take the flash off your camera, PistolPete.

Neither.

The actual band probably didn't have a lot to do with this, maybe.

I hope not, because its a pretty cheap item. I do hate to say it, but it does fit with the general Zeitgeist trend though. A lot of the stuff that has come out with this album has been cheap and commercial. I love the music, but not the marketing this time. I just hope Reprise is more to blame, than the Pumpkins themselves.
