I'm bound to catch it this weekend. Although, I'm frankly more of a Narnia (which was AWESOME) and X-Files girl.

Can't wait to see it. I plan to get down to the cinema in the next week or so at least (it's not as easy as you'd think where I am). Narnia was pretty cool too, and I'm kinda looking forward to the new Mummy film.

But I am also more of an X-Files girl. Although I'm a man.

OK, I have just returned from the midnight screening (in UK) and confirm that the new Indiana Jones film is actually pretty decent!!! Seriously, it is a lot of fun and some of the action sequences are amazing. Harrison Ford is brilliant as well as the rest of the cast actually (esp. Cate Blanchett). There are loads of great Indy jokes that keep it fun. There are a couple of stupid things in the film (but I wont say as to not to ruin it) but in general it is definately worth seeing and i can see it taking in a whole lot of money this year. It's faithfull to the previous films without trying to do anything radically different but it does work really well. Go see it!!!!

i saw it last night as well... pretty good. my only problem with it (and i'll be the first to admit i'm very picky about movies) is that there were more than a few scenes where it was painfully cgi... like it didn't even remotely look real.... and i realize they can't do that kinda crap really... but it should look remotely real.

but i liked it! it's not as good as 3, but really i couldn't be... definitely not the worst indy movie

I saw it last night, I don't think its the best Indy movie, but it's definitely worth seeing. I think it's a little more far fetched than the original 3 Indiana Jones movies went but I won't spoil anything. Still, well worth seeing!

Well, I saw it last night..and it really let me down, besides some cool scenes (Indy was rescued with the help of a snake), it was totally disappointing (especially this crapy alien-scenes in the end). And the CGI looked so poorly as if it was taken from an late 80s movie. I like the old trilogy much better, who's with me?

Indeed, but more like a parody on the old films:(

I think this was a perfect mindless summer film. Lots of fun! (Though I couldn't help but think Cate Blanchett played Irina too much like Galadriel. I half expected her to say, "I want the ring! Er, I mean THE SKULL!")
