That's the kind of cool that's the "in-crowd cool" type, except everyone knows that they arn't really cool, and everyone else who mopes about wishing they could be as cool as the in-crowd could be as cool as them.

In New Zealand, Bebo is the way to go.

MySpace is only good if you have a lot of friends on it. I used to be on it, but the only friends of mine that were on it was my girl friends (friends who are girls :roll )

Facebook is DEFINITELY for the older generation of NZ. Thirties upwards.

i have given up on myspace, to much to put up with, layouts and im, and whatnot, i don't have that much time on my hands.

i would rather be over here, with the cool people.

and facebook, i will stay away from there, cause i am never turning 30, right now i am 21.7

I'm seventeen and two-fifths old!

I think...

Ugh, how old is a sixth grader? Is it younger than thirteen?

i am pretty sure that they are younger than 13. i think it is like around 10 or so, i know it is young though, and i don't think kids that young need to be on the internet. at least not by themselves, my kids aren't allowed to be.

i dont get why people think facebook is one of those profile sites. its not really. i like it cause when you sign on it shows a list of new things on all of your friends' pages. new pictures and whatnot. really the only people you meet on there are people you already know, cause theres a snazzy little info box that shows people you might know based on friends in common or networks your in (same town, school). theres this funny little application called "neechie gifts" neechie being a racist term for native people, and the gifts are like pack of smokes, tipi, dances with wolves dvd, ernest monias cd. i only got a few of them so far. the ernest monias cd made me lol cause the week before i got it my dad went to his concert. the author of that app really knows his stuff. lol :yay

Wow, this thread is still going?

Facebook was cool 5 years ago when it was only available to college students. Plus not all universities had it, so it was only at the major schools. When they let all the other douche bags in, it went down hill.

Myspace was cool at first, but should have stayed more music oriented. I was big into the local music scene a few years ago and it was a great way to keep in touch with all the good bands.

Needless to say, I deleted my accounts when I graduated college. This is the only "social network" I need. :)

How can something be in a "local scene" when it's a website available to the entire world ? :confused

MySpace isn't my cup of tea.

But that's probably because just about everyone I know has Bebo, so it's just more useful to me. If everyone I knew was on MySpace, I'd join that instead.

jaded already?

i have a myspace page but i rarley go to it, when i do it is to check on friends music, or to see what comments people have left me. i try to leave really funny comments and that is about it.

but next time i go i will find and add you Trillian!

and facebook sounds like a cheap rip off of myspace, or is it the other way around? hummmmmmm

Neither. Both were developed independently. Frankly, I like Facebook better because you can more easily customize it, it has some neat "applications" (I'm quite addicted to this game based on the Heroes TV show) and you're much less likely to find trolls and spammers on there than MySpace.

Although, MySpace still wins when it comes to music.

I use MySpace almost exclusively for keeping informed about bands I like. And for that it's pretty much indispensable.

Anyone heard of orkut? It's a really fob version of myspace.

When it was first started, you could only make an account if you were invited to join. That's how I got in, so it showed how everyone was connected to each other.

---

Then it became open to everyone. :dead

There's actually a bundle of SP groups on Facebook. I quite like "Smashing Pumpkins Brought Us Together," which is moderated by Sunky's wife.
