Hi everyone!!! I'm a person you'll probably never meet, from a place you'll probaby never visit. Before I heard the Smashing Pumpkins, I could never see why everyone was so obsessed with popular music. I found most of it boring (I actually still do), and the only bands I had even a mild interest in were Green Day and the Red Hot Chili Peppers. Then one day I saw the Pumpkins performing on Saturday Night Live, and I was surprised to find that I actually liked the music. A lot! Enough so that I became very interested in them. This hardly ever happened! Later on, I bought Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness, and finally, I found a band that I could truly say I loved. I instantly transformed into an obsessive SP fan, and there were long periods of time when they were the ONLY thing I listened to. Even though my musical tastes are very limited, I have since branched out and discovered many other decent bands, and have found a few others that I can regard as my favorites (Sonic Youth, Los Fabulosos Cadillacs, Radiohead, The Cure), but The Smashing Pumpkins will always be my #1. Billy Corgan's lush, emotive power will never be equaled, as far as I'm concerned. The Smashing Pumpkins has become a part of my daily thoughts, and I'm forever grateful to Billy Corgan for introducing such beauty into my life.

Re: Introduce ourselves

Posted by Underwater - 2006/04/10 10:04

Hmm.... I was the same way with Pink Floyd... I used to think music generally sucked because my only taste of it was all this boring stuff on the radio.... then my friend gave me a copy of The Wall and I became obsessed with Pink Floyd for a while...

The next non-Pink-Floyd album I got was Mellon Collie, and I've been totally hooked to The Pumpkins ever since...

My nick is Elysium, means "abode of the blessed dead", which explains my philosophy on life right now. When we die weve all been blessed , either in life or in the release of it. SEE PS

My parents were hippies, I grew up in Michigan, small towns and mentalities. Im a rebel. I can be sweet and vile, all at the same time, a special kind of talent.

I loved Punkins from day 1 (though I wasnt crazy about 1979 at first), but i dabble in many genres and i have an open mind.

If you have a space and wanna ck out mine look up Elysium7, or ck out the profile.

Nice to meet ya'll. I'll hold down the fort here in nowheresville.

POST SCRIPT just decided my name is betterfitting --my nick here isnt elysium, its now lainiesunshine. I should really try to just accept things and move on....

Umm, I've kinda always listened to the Pumpkins, When I was born they were just getting popular and my dad was listening to their stuff. That was in 1990, I'm not really 35. Even though I'vealways listened to and loved the Pumpkins I've only recently been obsesed, cus I have nothing better to do with my life.

Hello. I'm Becca,24, and I've been a die-hard SP fan for just almost ten years now (i count starting with the first time I ever saw the video to "Tonight, Tonight" which was in June of 1996).
My other musical interests are Metallica, Alice In Chains, Red Hot Chili Peppers, Nine Inch Nails (and the last two i mentioned will both be here this summer on tour: yeah!)
I enjoy to read/write and I am an English major at a large, sterile, non-compassionate university.
I also enjoy my pets. I have 4 ferrets, 20 tarantulas and one scorpion.
Thats about it! I look forward to chatting with all you other Pumpkin People!

A Few Questions

Posted by cucuzza - 2006/09/10 21:46

Hey guys,

First off, let me introduce myself. I'm Joe and I'm 20, soon to be 21. I've began listening to the Smashing Pumpkins back in 1993 mainly because my sister got me into them and I've been listening to them since. They've always been one of my most favorite bands. I'm originally from Lyndhurst, NJ (about 10 minutes away from Manhattan), but currently I'm a junior living at the University of Scranton in Scranton, PA.

Now that the introductions are over, I've got a few questions that I was hoping you guys can answer.

First,

Does anyone know if the Pumpkins band members are all the original members? Will D'Arcy or Auf der Maur be the bassist? Will there be any additions to the group's lineup?

Second,

I know the RSPAA is a great resource to download some juicy rarities of the Pumpkins, however, is there any easier way to download the songs? I mean, you can't even download two at a time. Does anyone have any ideas?

Third,

I know this may sound dumb, but I'm not very music savvy. What is "Call Out Hook" on some of the singles? Is it basically 10 seconds of silence or something?

Fourth,

Why do different sections of the "Pastichio Medley" have different names?

Fifth,

Has anyone ever heard of the band "Hum"? They are a highly unrecognized band that had so much potential to be great. They've gained some popularity with their '95-'96 radio hit "Stars". I was wondering if anyone knew of any bands that are similar to this one. Also, does anyone have the remixes of Stars? They were done by Empirion, the side project of Prodigy.

Looking forward to hearing from you guys. Thanks in advance.

Re: A Few Questions

Posted by Rivers Cuomo - 2006/09/10 22:04

hey joe, what's up

we dont really know the line-up of the band yet, besides billy and jimmy also, you can find a whole lot of good media on this website

Re: A Few Questions

Posted by Murder McMurderson - 2006/09/11 05:55

Hi Joe.

#1 All we know is that Billy and Jimmy are in the band. The chances of James or Darcy coming back are looking slim.

#2 That's just the way it is.

#3 A Call Out Hook is a short sample from the song that radio stations use.

#4 The Pastichio Medley is made up of many instrumentals, and those instrumentals have names.

#5 I haven't heard the band.

Which makes me think...why don't more people know about this site? Is it a "well-guarded secret" kind of thing or is it more just a lack of publicity?

I've been lurking around these forums for a while in my quest to find a good place to share my undying love of the Pumpkins with those who can relate. I know some forums are pretty set against threads like these but I just figured I'd introduce myself to everyone here and say I look forward to the intelligent (and not so intelligent) discussions to follow .

Re: Greetings

Posted by KentM - 2007/03/26 11:26

Pabst Blue Ribbon (see my avatar)... It's beer, cheap beer, that gets slammed way more than deserved.

=====

Re: Greetings

Posted by Rivers Cuomo - 2007/03/26 18:40

Never heard of it either.

=====

Re: Greetings

Posted by PistolPete - 2007/03/26 19:42

From www.pabst.com:

PBR is not just any beer- so you would expect the history to be a bit unusual, and it is. Pabst was originally called "Select," but people started asking for that "Blue Ribbon" beer in 1882 when we started tying silk ribbons to the bottles. We officially added the words "Blue Ribbon" to the bottle in 1895.

Pabst was the first brewery to put beer in cans back in 1935. This was Blue Ribbon beer but it was called "Export" when sold in the can. Our first cans had a picture of a can opener on the side with instructions on how to open the can of beer, with the can opener.

Today, this classic American brew has been adopted by a whole new generation of PBR drinkers. Currently, PBR is one of the fastest growing domestic beer brands. When you're this good, quality always comes through-PBR ME ASAP!

They also make other classics such as Colt 45, Schlitz and Old Milwaukee.

i've never introduced myself, i am miguel from mexico city im 20, i've liked the pumpkins since adore/machina era, of course i was to young back then to know what life was about, i was not as die-hard fan as i am today, but as i grew up i listened to more and more pumpkins, i remember listening to ava adore on the radio and reading in the newspaper "the pumpkins final show", im a guitar player, i have three bands, quattro an indie-rock-pop-punk-somethinglikethat band, Riverside a grunge band, and the wicked muffins a wicked band, i came here looking for bootlegs, (RSPAA its slow sometimes), and started looking what you said in the forum, i've never really liked forums, specially netphoria they seem very unfriendly and mean, for me its something like "we know everything about the pumpkins and fuck the rest". anyhow i joined some day a few months ago and started posting, you are nice people, and you really like the pumpkins :D, love beeing here, i check the site almost everyday, sometimes twice or more, glad i'm a pumpkins.net member ;)

I suppose I should say my bit...

First song I heard and fell in love with was Today (or was it Disarm). That was back in January of 1995. I have gone through two cassette tapes of SD (haha) and 4 SD CDs... so I guess you could say I love that album, but really it just disappears, someone steals it or something.

And sad to say I've never seen them perform, live.

btw, I'm Julia, nearly thirty :o, from New Zealand.

Re: The Introduction Thread

Posted by dougydarkangel - 2007/05/24 02:27

Cant remember if i posted my story before, well...

It was back at the start of 2005, i had been pretty seriously depressed for nearly 6 months, i never really cared about anything at all, nothing really mattered to me at all. I was flunking at school (that bit hasnt changed ;)), and i was just watching tv one day and sure the infamous SP simpsons episode, i thought the band sounded cool so i thought i would check them out.

The next day i downloaded a few random songs, the first one that finished was spaceboy, i listened to it, and from the very first moment i knew there was something truely special about it, so much emotion and power. I know nowadays it is a cliché to say a band saved your life, but SP truely did for me, i saw no good in the world, no future for myself or anyone. But in the pumpkins music i found love, in its truest form.

After i started finding out more and more and trying to get as much as i could, i stumbled across netphoria, started posting there, but as i didnt hate billy corgan i was rejected imediatly, so i wasnt rushing to get back into a message board, and when i was looking for mach 2 i came across this site and looked into the message boards and thought there were really nice people, at that point there werent too many members, maybe 8 or so regulars, i dont know how many of those are left, but i know pumpkinjodi still drops in :). I am proud to see the site grow so much, and it has helped me imensly in growing my SP knowledge, were at netphoria if you dont imediatly know everything about the band you must be metaly retarded or something.

Kudos to murder for being so consistant and dedicated.

Hello Im Will from Derby UK

Been a fan since sometime in the early 90's when I first saw the Pumkins on Jools Holland Show doing Rhinoceros. Favourite Album is Siamese Dream but favourite song is thru the eyes of ruby, which is also my favourite song of all time by any artist!

Only just found this site a few months ago and been lurking a little before joining. really impressed with the ammount of bootlegs etc available :D

Anyway I cant wait for the new Album and hoping they do a tour on thier own in the UK at some point (I missed out on the festival tickets and cant afford the stupid prices on Ebay :()

Hello. My name is Zak. Live in SLC. I just recently started posting here.

I was about 9 or 10 when I heard Drown. My sister was playing it from her Singles soundtrack tape. I wasn't much into music at the time, but I enjoyed the song, just never cared to know who sang it. Then when I was about 13 I heard Disarm on the radio. Amazed by the song, I asked my friend who the band was. So I officially knew who SP was. Again, I wasn't too much into music. I enjoyed hearing the SD songs on the radio but left it at that. Finally, my eyes and heart awoke during the MCIS tour. My cousin got tickets to the concert and I decided to go knowing very few of their songs (I think other than the aforementioned songs, I'd only seen Rocket on MTV a few times)....I was in love. I was only able to see them 2 other times after MCIS. Both were amazing. I seen Zwan as well. Own a ton of bootlegs and T-Shirts (I think I have ~20 T's now :P). I'm such a fanboi, hehe.

I'm terribly disappointed I was unable to snag a Fillmore ticket :(High hopes that a "traditional" tour will take place or if they decide to keep it to smaller venues, at least hit somewhere around my parts. I'm betting a bunch of us harbour that same hope ;)

Hello everyone,

I've been registered here for a while and visit the site about twice a day but only post when I feel I really have something to contribute. I live in Eastern Ontario, Canada in a very small town but used to live in Toronto. I've been a fan of the Pumpkins since the Siamese Dream era when I was 17 and since then have never found another band that I could call a favorite. I am an avid supporter of indie rock and love listening to new music. Above all else I feel there is enough Pumpkin love to go around and have a real problem with fans who believe they are superior to others simply because they have been listening to/following them longer.

EDIT: I'm really excited to add that I've already bought my ticket to see them at the Virgin Festival in Toronto this September, I think it will be my 9th Corgan related show to date.

My name is Melanie.

I'm 37.

If this makes me the oldest person on the board, then everyone has to listen to what I say and agree with me. :P
I have loved Pumpkins for ever and ever. Everything about Billy's music, the words and the vocals, has always felt part of my interior soundtrack, if inside my head was a movie.

This is a nice board. I've avoided Pumpkins boards for a long time because of bad Netphoria experiences.

I live just outside of Chicago but I grew up in Detroit (I first heard Pumpkins on Canadian radio; I wanted to go see them play at this tiny place in Detroit for $6 but my mom wouldn't let me because it was a bad part of town and I didn't have anyone to go with. I begged my best friend to go with me if I paid for her ticket, but she said no because she didn't like them. I have had very bad luck with Pumpkins shows. Though I did manage to snag a ticket to one of the San Fran shows!) and in 3 years the plan is to live in the Pacific Northwest.

I tend to ramble.

Re: Newbie!

Posted by whyIHOP - 2007/08/15 10:56

thats how it starts....
get addicted to siamese dream, start wanting more, get MCIS listen to it forever, still want more, get the other albums, then find out about demos and other live versions everywhere and become an obsessively crazed pumpkin head like me

Re: Newbie!

Posted by zerohero84 - 2007/08/15 13:18

The order I actually got started was...

Heard a song on the radio... Zero, I think.
Then borrowed MCIS from my brother, and I loved it.
Went to store and bought Gish, loved it.
Bought MCIS at discount store...
Bought TAFH box set...
Then bought Adore when it came out.
Quickly bought Siamese Dream, then Pisces.
Bought Machina, found Machina II and all other b-sides online...

I have so many damn songs of theirs (live and studio), I barely know what to do with them, ha.

as with many bands that i now love, i HATED the sp. well billy anyway. i was a hardcore (lol) Hole fan and thought that if clove hated someone so did i. so it wsnt til like 99 that i gave them a real go, i had adore on tape from a cousin and didnt give it much of a listen (its my favourite album EVER now not just fav sp) which was stupid of me, then one day my friend mitchell was telling me more about them and i respected his taste in music alot, so i went and bought siamese dream, LOVED IT, and have never turned back. hole were my fav band for years now its the pumpkins! but i still thank clove for most of my taste in music..

Re: The Introduction Thread

Posted by Trillian - 2007/08/18 17:48

Hey, so finally I'm posting a proper intro.

Hello, my name is Melissa and for 12 years I've been a Pumpkins-aholic. First got hooked by seeing BWW on MTV (I thought Jimmy was hot! Hehe.) Siamese Dream saved my life (my favorite SP song still remains "Mayonaise.") I'm a former member of the Southern California Smashing Pumpkins Fan Club -about 100 of us used to meet monthly around SoCal at amusement parks, the beach, parties, etc and wore our SP shirts with pride (the club kind of fell apart in 2003 after Zwan's breakup but I remain best friends with many of the members ... although I think I'm really the only hardcore Pumpkins fan left.)

I'm a music journalist and have had the great pleasure of interviewing on separate occasions Jimmy and Ginger over the phone and Billy IN PERSON. (Needless to say, that was one of the happiest days of my life.) I caught SP in concert before the breakup twice - never the original lineup though, doh! Zwan six times and Billy solo once. And I'm seeing the new SP in Toronto! wheeeee!

Hello!
Here's my story-
I was in high school when Siamese Dream came out. I borrowed the cassette from a friend of mine and copied it because I loved Today. Well, needless to say I completely wore it out because I couldn't get enough it! Later on I heard BWBW and 1979 and I got MCIS and it stayed in my CD player for like, ever. I got away from them for a while, sad to say, and my interests went elsewhere. Then two years ago I heard Cherub Rock on the radio and it made me miss it terribly. I went out and got Rotten Apples, fell in love with Eye and Ava Adore and Perfect. So I bought Adore. It was at that point I went from a casual fan to a true FANATIC!! Since then I've bought Siamese Dream(on cassette for sentimental reasons, but I have it on CD too.) Gish, Pisces, Lull, Machina, TAFH, Zeitgeist(silver and red)and I have downloaded everything I can possibly find. I am so obsessed now that I can hardly get through the day w/o it!

yes welcome, i thought we needed a thread like this. and it seems we had one already. we should really keep this on the first page here so people can say hey when they first get here.

ok, well hi, my name is jennifer and i have been a pumpkinhead for 13 years now. i first heard them in high school, loved and been a fanatic ever since.

oh and i am also a chocoholic.

well then I suppose I will follow suit with bullet...

I'm Carrie and I have been a Pumpkin fan for 17 or 18 years now. My brother introduced me to Gish and SD and here I am now....

I'm married, a momma of 3 boys and I love doing art :)

welcome Catchgwithoutarms & chrislvsp :)

I didn't even know this thread existed and PistolPete I thought your name was Pete ;) and you own a pistol...lol

That is so funny!

Thanks for the nice welcome!

I would also like to say that I am a proud single mom to a wonderful eight year old boy :)

I am also a student working on eventually getting a degree in graphic design.

I used to be really active on this site a few months ago but then for some reason I got sick of it.

I'm trying to get back in now but the pumpkins aren't really doing anything that interests me. So I usually find myself posting in every thread but the Smashing Pumpkins one which is ironic.

Any way, I'm trying to get back into it again haha, yeah that was me.

I was going to untill I found out it hurts on the crapper hahaha.

Sorry for getting any body's hope up.

I did recently make 5 bucks for wearing a dog's shock collar for 10 seconds though haha! how did that feel?

and a few weeks ago i was posting everywhere but the smashing pumpkins thread, until i realized that i could spread my dislike of the current band in there. but i must say, the residency dvd is looking mighty fine

Pfahaha, at first I didn't see the word "shock" and I thought "So? Big deal.."

Poor you.

Hello! Been a Pumpkins fan since sometime in the MCIS era. A friend of mine wanted MCIS for his birthday, so I picked it up for him. Listened to it a couple of times that night (listened to Zero sooo many times) and I knew I had to get my own copy. I considered myself a fan from that point on. The funny part was I already loved Disarm and Today but never realized that they (and the MCIS singles) were all by the same band.

I used to run a small website during the Machina-era where I dissected the various Flash animations that were on the SP.com front page. (oh wow, Tripod hasn't deleted it yet).

Also, for two years in college, I ran an FTP site serving up SP demos and bootlegs ("Dreaming of Rest FTP"). This was before the internet got spoiled by bittorrent :D

Oh well, that's enough blathering for me.
